

Arizona Becomes a State

At first, the United States Congress wanted Arizona and New Mexico to be one state. After 56 years of talking about it, they finally voted yes. President William Howard Taft signed Arizona into statehood on February 14, 1912; making it the 48th state. Arizona only had 200,000 people living here at the time.

Where in the world was your family living in 1912?

Were they living in the United States or in a different country?

If you could ask them one question, what would you ask?
