Heavy drinking may result in a loss of memory and cause a “blackout” of what happened when the person was drinking. During a blackout, a person may engage in behaviors like walking or talking but may not remember doing so.

Frequent binge drinkers (nearly 1 million high school students nationwide) are more likely to engage in risky behaviors, including using other drugs such as marijuana and cocaine.

Alcohol is a depressant. This means that it slows down activity in the brain.

Drinking lowers inhibitions and increases the chances that children will engage in risky behavior or do something that they will regret when they are sober.
